THREE-ROOM AND FOUR-ROOM SCHOOL BUILDINGS

SUPPLEMENT TO
ONE-ROOM AND TWO-ROOM RURAL SCHOOL BUILDINGS

All the specifications contained in the bulletin No. 152, Extension Series No. 4, One-Room and Two-Room Rural School Buildings, will apply in the plan for these larger buildings. The rooms are exactly the size of those in the smaller buildings. There are merely additional rooms extending over additional space. No extra strain or demand of any kind is placed on the building material. There is, therefore, no reason for further specifications than those contained in the bulletin, and those indicated in the accompanying cuts.

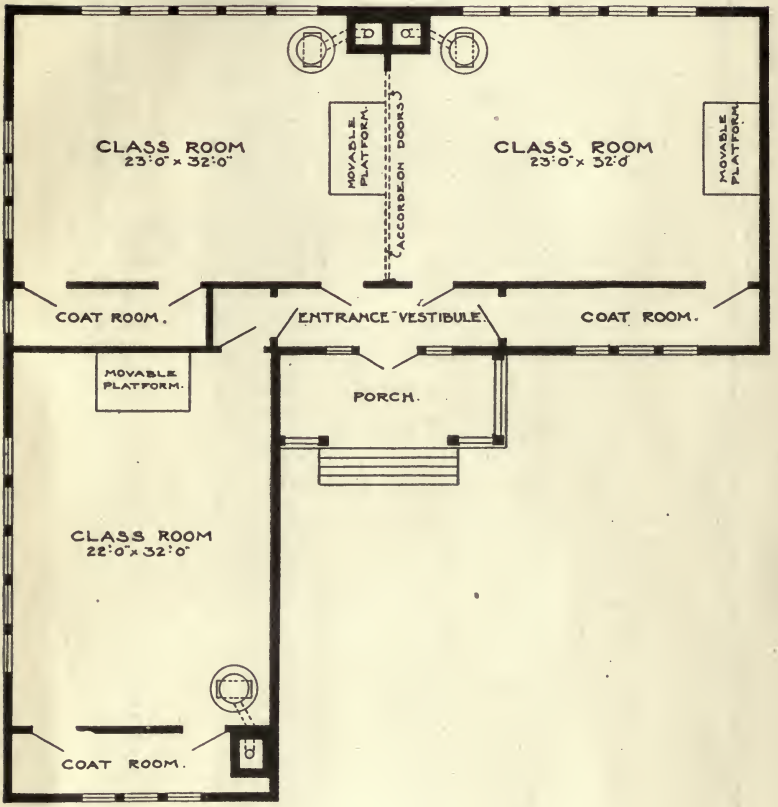
Three-Room Plan.

Three-room building, erected either by adding one room to the two-room building as specified by the Department of Extension of the University of Texas; or as an original plan for a new three-room building.

Digitized by Microsoft®



The chief value of this plan is that two of the rooms have south and one of them east exposure. This is, the Texas climate considered, the ideal arrangement. All the rooms are protected on the north and west from the objectionable north and west winds and the west sun.

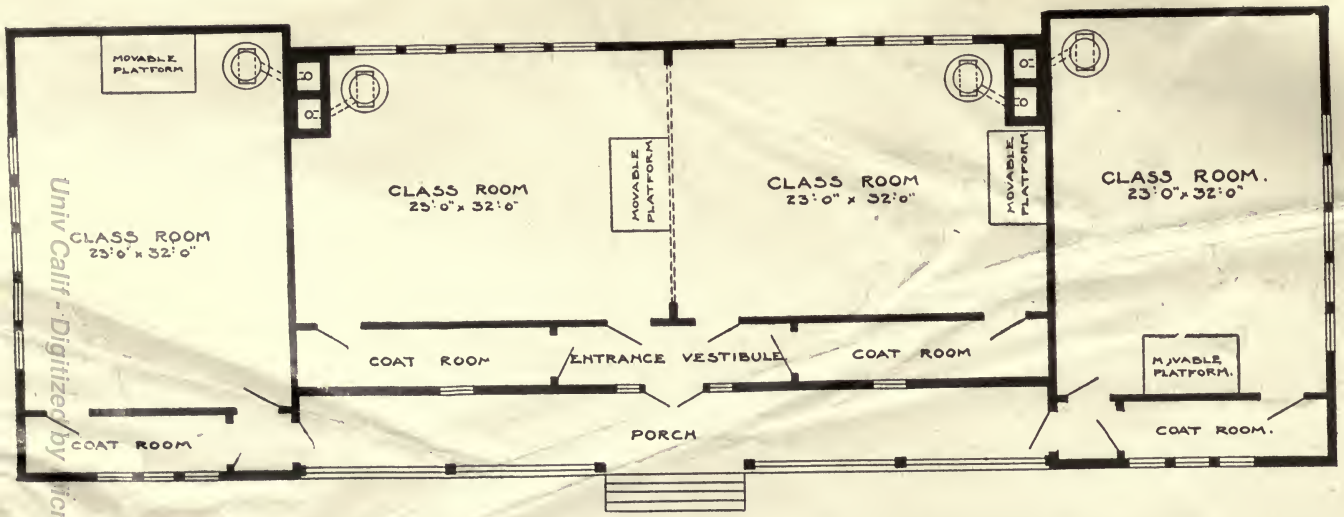
Four-Room Plan.

This plan is simple, artistic and inexpensive. All the rooms are on the ground, thus the confusion occasioned by noisy feet in one room above another is avoided, and there is less danger to the children from fire. The plan also gives opportunity for the projecting eaves which shut much of the direct sunlight out of the room.



Three of the rooms have desirable exposure. All the rooms are protected on the north, and only one is exposed on the west.

Two chimneys serve for the entire building.
